Dear Mrs Rome-Tankut

Environmental Protection Act 1990 section 79
Re: Cosmopolitan 30 St Georges Street Chorley PR7 2AA

This letter contains important information about your premises

Further to complaints received from a number of residents relating to noise from loud music being played at the above premises and the associated noise from patrons, I have carried out an investigation for statutory nuisance.

I have visited the premises several times to provide advice and guidance, as there was evidence of excessive noise from the premises.

Unfortunately, those informal actions have not succeeded in reducing the volume sufficiently to prevent a noise nuisance. The premises remain a cause of complaint despite our best efforts to engage with the management.

Colleagues from our Licensing Team visited the premises at approximately 23.45 on Friday 10th September and were shocked and disappointed to note the excessive volume of the music played by the premises. It was clearly heard from a significant distance from the premises.

In addition, the loud volume of the music resulted in undue noise from patrons singing, shouting and screaming above this level.

Residents have also confirmed the impact of the noise within their properties at the time of the visit by the Licensing Team and further into the night, with the noise not subsiding until approximately 2am.

Where I believe that a statutory nuisance exists, I have a duty to take formal action to abate that nuisance. In this case my colleagues have advised they would be willing to provide formal witness statement supporting the issue of an abatement notice.

Therefore, I have included a notice served on yourself as a Director of the company (Cocktailium Limited) and Premises Licence Holder.

You are also advised that non-compliance of the notice will result in court proceedings and you may be subject to an unlimited fine or a custodial sentence.

Your Premises Licence is also at risk and I will be discussing further the review of that licence with the Licencing Team as a failure to meet the licencing objective to prevent public nuisance.

This is a serious matter and although we have made efforts to informally resolve the issues at the premises, there has been a blatant disregard for the consideration of residents.

Yours sincerely

Chorley Council
